

North American Missions And Annie Armstrong Easter Offering

"You really should hear them sing."

That's one of the first things David Gaskins tells people when they ask about Mosaic Church in Provo, Utah, where he and his wife, Sara, serve as church planting missionaries. "Every Sunday, it brings me to tears," David says. "The voices are just thunder in that room because so many of our people have lost everything for Jesus."

David and Sara Gaskins

Provo, where only 0.5% of the population is evangelical Christian, is one of the most statistically unchurched cities in North America. That's because this city of 130,000 people is, according to David, the "heartbeat and hub" of the worldwide Mormon church.

"Everything here revolves around Mormonism," David says. "So when someone in Provo leaves the Mormon church, it's a really big deal. We've had people get cut off from their family, lose their jobs, get kicked out of school—for many of them, this church is all they have. That's why they sing loud."

Now several years old, Mosaic Church has grown slowly but surely because of gifts to the Annie Armstrong Easter Offering.

"Planting a church in a place like this was obviously a tall order, and we couldn't have done it without churches giving to Annie Armstrong," David says. "Because of their generosity, there's now an evangelical church right here across the street from a Mormon temple, teaching and preaching about the real Jesus."

ANNIE ARMSTRONG EASTER OFFERING

"For who is greater, the one at the table or the one serving?
Isn't it the one at the table?
But I am among you as the one who serves."
